NJLM Conference Background

The nation's largest municipal conference has more than a century's experience bringing together the community of local government officials. This year, the annual event offers educational sessions covering topics from 'Using Humor in Governance' and 'Improving Population Health,' to 'Best Practices for Municipal Websites' and 'Optimizing Economic Development Success in Communities.'

Attendees include a representative "slice" of local government officials involved in the decision-making process. NJ local elected and appointed officials, department heads, purchasing agents, public works and professional administrators will be represented.

Event organizers expect 16,000 attendees for the three-day learning experience which provides benefits throughout the year. The conference offers approximately 125 panels, workshops, clinics and other educational sessions and will showcase over 725 exhibitors.
